WINDSOR NOT FOUND

Careful inquiry throughout the lower unties Monday failed to bring any verfication of the rumor sent out from Bridgeville last Sunday that the body of Edward Windsor, the Milford patricid now a fugitive from the Delaware author nimself with a knife.

There is both telegraphic and telenonic communication with Ellendale and a careful investigation in that neigh-borhood elicited the facts that no body had been found in that neighborhood and that, while it is believed that Windsor vas taken to that neighborhood under a load of pea vines, yet there is no doubt the rumor was started to aid the young nan in making good his escape by throwng his pursuers off his track.

The young man, in the heat of his rash and brutal act in his father's hotel, did has at last perfected a Treatment which leave his victim with the threat that he was going to take his own life, but it is was going to take his own life, out is understood that he changed his mind by removing the cause, stopping the diswhen $500 was raised and handed to him charges, and curing all inflamation. to make good his escape for the sake of the other members of the family.

ury officials have been surprised by eipt from internal revenue for the first half of this month. It was naturally expected that the reductions which went nto effect the first of the month would nake the receipts considerably smaller than for the corresponding period last year, but instead of that, they have been a little larger every day, and for the half nonth in round figures, $1,000,000 greater than for the first half of July last year. ome think that this may be accounted for by the fact that changes were made n a number of classes of revenue stamps, and that large users allowed their supply to entirely run out by the first of the onth, and have, consequently, purchased large quantities since then. What ever the cause, the receipts have been larger when they were expected to be

MIDDLETOWN, DEL., JULY 20, 1901.

BRYANISM IS DYING The Democrats of Ohio at their recent State Convention refused to endorse Mr. Bryan and the Kansas City platform, and nomiplatform along conservative name allticket. They are going to make sure of the personnel of of this convention by requiring all the delegates to sign a declaration endorsing free silver. This action is not unexpected, for it would not be reasonable to suppose that those who honestly believes in the principle of free silver and who have for the past six years controlled the organization of the party should sit quietly down and see that control wrested from them. These out-andout free silverites probably constitute about one-third of the Democratic forces, or say in round numbers 2,000,000 voters. Of these, fully one-half will stick by the party for the same reason that the gold Democrats have stuck, namely party regularity. This leaves the 1,000,000 votes who cast their ballots for Weaver in 1892 and who are the real 16 to 1 advocates. It was these votes that the Democrats were reaching after in 1896 and without

STRIKES

One of the unfortunate results of prosperity is the prevalence of strikes. Men do not ask for more pay, shorter hours, or the relief of any other grievance during hard times But this time when the air is full of the great prosperity that has come to this country, under the administration of President McKinley, there are strikes and rumors of strikes. Just as the machinists strike is about ended, comes the beginning of the steel workers strike. The former strike was ostensibly for nine hours work with ten hours pay, and was made in face of a binding agreement to arbitrate any differences. A steady increase in wages and a shortening of hours has been in progress for a hundred years, and every advance in this direction is, and should be welcomed But such gains are not usually made as a result of broken agreements. At City. the end of eight weeks, both sides a ten days' visit with her sister in Philato the controversy claim success, delphia. but it is probable that had not Mr. O'Connell the President of the Machinists Association insisted too strongly on recognition Miss Bessie R. ssociations of workers, such as the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Fireman is that the men do not strike but the leaders ask for and receive recognition. The reason they receive recognition is that the railroad companies know that when the word of these leaders has passed that settles the question, and they do not ask a conference until the cause is just. In every dispute, there are two sides and the true "labor leader" sees both sides and is willing to arbitrate. But men like Mr. O'Connell who nated candidates and adopted a put the recognition of a union and Miss Lou, were entertained at Clear View the consequent importance of its lines. N. Harman for refurnishing the court room. Much surprise was expressed at the size of this bill, but no one seemed to have the right to raise objection even if the law does require that in all matters involving an expenditure of $500 or more advertisement shall be made and the contract awarded to the lowest and the best bidder. One thing the county is to be congratulated upon is that all bills are now read n open court and thus the people can see who gets their money even though they cannot tell what it is expended for. For this much we are duly thankful.

Sharpers have a new plan and are working it in some parts of the State. They first examine the court records in order to get the names of the parties against whom accounts are pending and from the papers they gain a pretty fair knowledge of the case. Then they drive to the home of the victim and claim that they are attorneys authorized to compromise the case for a certain sum. As the amount seems reasonable the parties put up the money.

Daniel P. Miller, claiming Philadelphia as his home, was arrested along the Del ware & Chesapeake Canal on Thnrsday by Constable William T. Money, and when brought to town attracted much attention. The farmers succeeded in the midst of the high temperature to get their wheat cut, but have met with unusual discour gement since with the threshing. Most ery morning last week there was heavy fog, lasting until nearly noon, with possible sprinkles of rain. Then came he easterly storm Friday evening that lasted throughout Saturday, wetting the warm, south winds since have been any hing but drying and consequently the ost of the wheat is yet in the fields.

A new principal was elected at a specia eeting of the Board of Education las Friday night, to fill the vacancy of Prof. C. S. Why Buy Your Whiskey Abroad?

DO YOU KEEP WHISKEY IN YOUR HOUSE? We presume you do, else you are an exception to the rule.

If you are threatened with Consumption there is no treatment equal to one or two drinks a day.

If you have a bad cold a warm toddy at bed time is the thing. In Scarlet Fever, Pneumonia, LaGrippe and Typhoid Fever it is necessary. When you are tired it will strengthen you. When downhearted, it will cheer you up. It is a friend in need and a friend indeed.

But you should not abuse a friend, therefore use whisky wisely. If you do not abuse it, it will ever be your faithful servant. If you abuse it, it will make you its slave. No man becomes a drunkard save after years of determined effort in that direction. Take our advice; use whisky wisely. Don't buy cheap whisky, but buy the best. Do you ask who sells the best? The question shows that you are not posted. We invite you to take a drink of ours and then ask yourself the question.

BY E. L. M.

LANCING down the register of the most-fashionable hotel at a most fashionable water-ing place, Percy Everett ing place, Percy Everett suddenly started, and drew in his breath with a long, low whistle.

Miss Keith was the name which had s startled him, and the date of her arrival argued that she had preceded him by a Miss Keith! How familiarly it appeared written upon the page of the book! And yet he had no idea of how the original of the name looked, except in the over-like rhapsodies which had come to im in Dick Thurston's letters. Dick and he had been sworn friends years, and Miss Keith was Dick's be rothed wife. One of his many epistles n the subject had run thus: "If you could only see her, Percy, old ellow, you would not wonder at my infatuation. I am sure you would be fast friends. I have talked of you to her by he hour and she says she is quite sur that she must know you as well as I do. But that is impossible. Did she love you one twentieth part as well, I should be jealous of you both. Seriously, however, Percy, she is a pearl beyond price. You might, when you first meet her, think her cold—you could not fail to think her beautiful-but wait until you know her better, watch the sunshine play over her face, and the deep, earnest light come into her eyes and you will then laugh a our own mistake. There is but one thing troubles me in connection with it What have I done to make me worthy of her?"

It was all this flashing through Perc Everett's mind, which roused him to udden interest, where, a moment before had reigned languid indifference.

Dick, his friend, was out on the plains, with his command, doing some hot wor this summer among the Indians. He was a brave, splendid fellow, and Percy ather thought it was Miss Keith who ought to be congratulated.

She was standing on the piazza, sur rounded by a little group of admirers when he first saw her. Some one pointed her out to him, and he stood a little distance, for a time, enjoying the picture. She was dressed in some white, cling ng stuff, relieved with lace and knots o ribbon, which showed to perfection th xquisite, supple form.

Her head was small, with the golden rown hair arranged in some mysteriou lending of puffs and tiny curls high pon it; her eyes seemed gray or black, coording to the emotion of the moment; er mouth, none too small, showed two ows of white, even teeth; her complex n was like a child's.

No, Dick's description had not been verdrawn. There could be no doubt a Miss Keith's beauty. Just then, Percy espied a friend wh knew her, and begged that he would ask ner permission to present him.

He watched him while he did so, a w the rich color rush to her face, the swift glance she gave in his direction bent seaward.

In another moment, the introduction had been formally accomplished. In half an hour, they were talking together as though they had known each other al their lives.

How could it be otherwise but that, in the days that followed, they should be thrown constantly in each other's so ciety? Between them there was one un failing topic of conversation. True, they would wander off from it on to all sorts of themes, then suddenly drag themselves back into it, as though it were necessary to keep Dick's claim constantly in the

And so the days came and went, mergng into weeks. There were long walks, nd drives, and talks, each more delight-all than the other. One afternoon, they ad sauntered forth as usual from the el, turning their steps in the direction the beach.

"Let us go to the cave," Miss Keith oposed.

"How about the tide?" he questioned. 'We have plenty of time before it rises. me, let us go."

And soon they had lost sight of the atside world in the dark and hidden cesses. From where they stood within s walls, they could catch the sound of sea lashing its waters against its outide bulwarks. Within was darkness and silence—the world seemed lost to hein. Thus standing upon a single rock. They looked into each other's faces. Their eyes met, their sophistries were in that nstant hurled to the ground; their secret was discovered. A mighty impulse seized Percy Everett's soul to catch her in his
